

MINO PEPTIDES

Company boilerplate.

Three approved descriptions of Mino Peptides at three different lengths, for use in press releases, pitch emails, website copy, and partnership documents.

This document contains the official short, medium, and long boilerplate descriptions of Mino Peptides. Each version tells the same core story at a different length, and each is approved for use without modification in press releases, media pitches, bylined articles, partnership announcements, grant applications, and any other external communication.

The short version is intended for pitch email signatures, social media profiles, and situations where brevity matters. The medium version is the default boilerplate for press releases and media-facing announcements. The long version is intended for website copy, partnership documents, and situations where a fuller company description is warranted.

When in doubt, use the medium version. When adapting for a specific context, maintain the core positioning language (“pharmaceutical-grade”, “credentialed clinical accounts”, “thirty-nine compounds across six therapeutic categories”) and the contact point (hello@mino.life).

Short boilerplate.

Approximately thirty words. Intended for signatures, social profiles, and brief company mentions.

Mino Peptides is a wholesale platform supplying pharmaceutical-grade peptide therapeutics to licensed medical spas, aesthetic practices, longevity clinics, and integrative medicine groups across the United States. mino.life

33 WORDS

WHEN TO USE

The short version is appropriate for pitch email signature blocks, social media bio fields with character limits, brief company mentions in news wires or listings, and any context where you have fewer than fifty words to describe the company.

APPROVED VARIATIONS

The phrase “medical spas, aesthetic practices, longevity clinics, and integrative medicine groups” may be shortened to “licensed clinical practices” if space is constrained. The closing URL may be omitted if the context makes the source obvious.

Medium boilerplate.

Approximately one hundred words. The default boilerplate for press releases and media pitches.

WHEN TO USE

The medium version is the default boilerplate for press releases, media pitch emails, partnership announcements, bylined article footers, and any context where you have roughly a paragraph to describe the company. This is the version that should appear at the bottom of most external communications.

KEY PHRASES

The phrases “pharmaceutical-grade,” “thirty-nine compounds across six therapeutic categories,” “cGMP-compliant manufacturing partners,” and “credentialed account model” are the load-bearing positioning terms in this version and should be preserved verbatim when the text is quoted or adapted.

Long boilerplate.

Approximately two hundred words. For website copy, partnership documents, and fuller company descriptions.

About Mino Peptides. Mino Peptides is a business-to-business wholesale platform supplying pharmaceutical-grade peptide therapeutics to licensed clinical practices across the United States. The company's portfolio spans thirty-nine compounds across six therapeutic categories (Regeneration, Metabolic, Longevity, Performance, Cognitive, and Vitality), sourced from cGMP-compliant manufacturing partners and verified through independent third-party analytical testing. Every compound ships with a Certificate of Analysis, storage protocol, and clinical reference material appropriate to the prescriber.

Mino serves medical spas, aesthetic practices, longevity clinics, integrative medicine groups, and enterprise multi-location networks through a credentialed account model, with a three-tier wholesale pricing framework that reflects trailing order volume and category breadth. The company does not serve the consumer market and requires credentialing review of every account to confirm practitioner licensure, practice location, and clinical context.

Mino was co-founded by Chief Executive Officer Elizabeth Straus, a healthcare operator and United States military veteran with prior executive leadership at CareOne and as a co-founder of 18 Medical MSO, and Chief Medical Officer Brandon Howard, MD, who is board-certified in Internal Medicine and serves as Medical Director of the affiliated RegenRX Health Institute in Paramus, New Jersey. Taglines and messaging framework.

Beyond the three approved boilerplate versions, the following taglines and core messages should appear consistently across Mino communications. They are not substitutes for the boilerplate and should not be used in place of the full company description, but they serve as supporting language in headlines, section breaks, and marketing materials.

PRIMARY TAGLINE

| The quiet infrastructure of modern medicine.

SECONDARY POSITIONING LINES

A pharmaceutical-grade peptide platform for credentialed clinical practice.

Built for the practitioner, not the consumer.

Where integrity meets the supply chain.

Sourcing, documentation, and delivery worthy of the medicine.

CORE MESSAGES

On sourcing. Direct relationships with cGMP-compliant manufacturing partners. No grey-market intermediaries, no repackaged research chemicals.

On regulatory posture. FDA-approved, investigational, and research-only compounds are labeled accurately. The distinctions are real and they matter.

On the customer relationship. Mino does not serve the consumer market. Every account begins with credentialing review.

On documentation. Every compound ships with a Certificate of Analysis, storage protocol, and clinical reference material.

LANGUAGE TO AVOID

Mino communications avoid wellness-speak, unsubstantiated health claims, consumer-direct marketing language, and language that blurs the distinction between approved and investigational compounds. Specifically, the terms “semaglutide” and “Retatrutide” should not appear in public-facing materials; the latter is referred to as “GLP3-RT” throughout the Mino portfolio documentation. The company does not reference service-disabled veteran-owned business status in any public materials.
